Build Your Skills with Library Webinars

by Mary Shultz & Irene Williams

Do you want to know more about our online databases, how to find ebooks, or the buzz about the NIH Mandate? If you don’t have the time to sift through help screens or attend in-person training, why not try one of the Library’s online workshops? You can attend from your home, office, computer lab, etc.

This semester, the Library is offering a wide range of training opportunities including bibliographic management programs such as EndNote and RefWorks, information on maintaining your rights as an author, how to use library resources on your smart phone, and more. So, build a new skill or just refresh your memory!

Sessions offered this semester are listed below. To learn more about any of the webinars or how to sign up, please go to our Online Instruction Page (http://library.uic.edu/home/services/instruction-and-workshops/online-workshops).
