Attend a Workshop from your Office or from Home!

By Mary Shultz

You may not be aware of the numerous online workshops offered by The Library of the Health Sciences throughout the year. Do you want to know the best ways to find medical images online? Or, learn which Library resources are available on your smart phone? Perhaps you would like to learn how to increase the impact of your research or retain your rights as an author. Our online webinars offer you an opportunity to update your search skills on databases such as PubMed, learn new systems such as one of our online drug databases, or you may want to suggest sessions to your students.

Below is a list of available sessions. To find out more and register for a session please see our Online Workshops page. The registration information is found at the bottom of the page.
